No problem with Sandy coming along at 11 – I'm sure this will be very helpful.

Do you have any objection if Sandy Stewart joins [REDACTED] and I at this morning's meeting?

Just to let you know that [REDACTED] cannot make the meeting, so has delegated to the Deputy Director leading police Division, [REDACTED].

On attendees, on our side, it will be me, [REDACTED] and [REDACTED]. If [REDACTED] could attend, I'm sure that would be helpful.

The agenda looks fine - I will want to make sure we understand each other's timelines: SG's for publishing the statistics; and ours for completing the assessment.

I expect it will just be [REDACTED] and I along on Friday, though the relevant policy Director (Paul Johnston) has been engaged in this recently and is considering rearranging his diary to attend. I'll let you know if he is coming.

Not sure there is anything you could provide. I wondered whether to structure the conversation we use an agenda something like...

1. Introductions and objectives for this work
2. Where we currently are - reflections and emerging issues
3. next steps - priorities to best support the work

Let me know if this sounds a sensible way to structure the conversation.
Looking forward to seeing you again on Friday.

We are due to meet on Friday to talk about our assessment of police recorded crime in Scotland. I just wanted to check who from the Scottish Government side will accompany you to the meeting, and also if there's anything we can provide in advance.

Happy to discuss if you'd find that helpful

Kind regards
