PAGE 4: Impact of ONS statistics

Q9: Have ONS statistics and analyses helped to inform any decisions you or your organisation has made over the last year? Please select one answer only

Yes,

Please provide examples and further comments
We use statistical data to provide evidence of the needs and issues facing people from protected characteristic groups. Having national statistics to support evidence of need is vital to proving the need for targeted and tailored interventions. Disaggregating more statistics by equality characteristics and by more characteristics would be extremely useful to this task.

Q10: Have ONS statistics and analyses helped inform your policies over the last year? Please select one answer only

Yes

Q11: What information, advice or services could we provide to help inform your decision making and policies?

Respondent skipped this question

Q12: To what extent have ONS statistics, analyses and advice been helpful in providing an evidence base for your decision making and policies over the last year? Please select one answer only

Moderately helpful

------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	----------------------

Q15: Please tell us what you think we are doing well.	Respondent skipped this question
--------------------------------------------------------------	-----------------------------------------

Q16: Please tell us what you think we could do better.	Respondent skipped this question
---------------------------------------------------------------	-----------------------------------------

Q17: Please tell us if there is anything we don't currently do which you would like us to.

Statistics need to be disaggregated by each protected characteristic group and by multiple groups. Without national statistics disaggregated by gender; gender identity; sexual orientation; age; disability; religion or belief; ethnic origin; language; and caring status it is difficult to prove to decision-makers, to their satisfaction, that there are different needs and issues facing groups, which require tailored interventions. Even where these are not sufficiently robust to be national statistics releases should be available with information with caveats. This is important to addressing issues in education, health, mental health, employment, earnings, housing, and various areas.

Q18: Taking into account everything you know about ONS, overall, how satisfied or dissatisfied are you with the performance of ONS as a national statistics institute?Please select one answer only	Satisfied
------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	-----------

Q19: Which of the following statements best reflects your overall view of ONS?Please select one answer only	I would speak highly of ONS, if someone asked my opinion
